

1. Psychological trigger like high arousal emotions, examples context that triggers excitement, awe or even sad. 2. Algorithmic metrics such as engagement, 3 - 5 seconds hook, trending sound or seo. 3. Relatability and Originality

First I'd open with a bold, curiosity-driven moment in the first 3-5 seconds to stop the scroll.

Second, I'd design the content specifically for the platform's algorithm (keeping it short, relate, share-worthy and easy to react to)

A video often performs poorly when it fails to capture attention quickly, especially in the first few seconds. Other key reasons include unclear information, i.e content that doesn't match the platform's audience or algorithm, weak thumbnail/ caption etc
